

CONTENTS

STEVE ELLIS and ORIT GADIESH, world-wide managing director and chairman of Bain & Company respectively, share their strategy for competing against China's new breed of multinational. PAGE 5

DAVID M. MARCHICK, a partner at law firm Covington & Burling and former deputy assistant secretary of state in the Clinton administration, and EDWARD M. GRAHAM, a senior fellow at the Institute for International Economics, offer lessons for Chinese firms looking for a foothold in the U.S. market. PAGE 10

A. LIN NEUMANN, former executive editor of the Hong Kong Standard, explains how the international community failed East Timor a second time. PAGE 15

COLUM MURPHY, deputy editor of the REVIEW, examines Prime Minister Abdullah's not-quite-perfect plan to reinvent Malaysia. PAGE 19

HUGO RESTALL, editor of the REVIEW, interviews the man driving Singapore's rulers crazy, opposition leader Chee Soon Juan. PAGE 24

JONATHAN ADAMS, a Taipei-based writer for Newsweek, explores the political roots of Taiwan's current crisis of confidence. PAGE 28

BALBINA Y. HWANG, an adjunct professor at Georgetown University, looks at how democracy in South Korea is evolving. PAGE 33

DAVID ZWEIG, professor at Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, reveals a disconcerting trend among graduates returning to China, and BENJAMIN ROBERTSON, a Beijing-based free-lance writer, reports on China's education system redesign. PAGE 37

WANG JIANMAO, associate dean of the China-Europe International Business School in Shanghai, diagnoses China's critical shortage of middle-level managers. PAGE 44

PICHIT LIKITKIJSOMBOON, an associate professor of economics at Thammasat University in Bangkok, adds up the cost of Thailand's political impasse on the economy. PAGE 49

ADRIAN HO, a graduate of the University of Toronto interning at the REVIEW, laments the missed opportunity of a Hong Kong waterfront project. PAGE 53

REVIEWS:

HUGO RESTALL on two contrasting attempts to sum up China's development. PAGE 57 • MARTIN LAFLAMME on the history of the Japanese war memory debate. PAGE 59 • AMY E. GADDEN on an updated analysis of China-U.S. relations based on recently released archives from the Nixon era. PAGE 61 • ROBERT M. HATHAWAY on how elites in China and India define their national interests. PAGE 63 • GREG RUSHFORD on a CIA analyst's fight to keep the agency honest. PAGE 65 • KIN-MING LIU on diverging U.S. policy options in East Asia. PAGE 66 • ROSE ISMAIL on a clamp-down on Islamic religious schools in Singapore. PAGE 68 • BENJAMIN ROBERTSON on two quests to retrace the Long March. PAGE 70 • MITALI SARAN on a lyrical first attempt at fiction by Indian journalist Sonia Faleiro. PAGE 72 • ILARIA MARIA SALA on the unstable nature of Chinese militia groups. PAGE 74 • MURDER MYSTERIES: The REVIEW's list of the best hard-boiled novels set in Asia. PAGE 75 • FROM THE ARCHIVES REVIEW correspondents Bertil Lintner and Mark Dodd report on the birthing pains of East Timor independence. PAGE 78