Practice pointers from this issue of Nursing2007

For most patients with cardiac conditions, the risks of taking prophylactic antibiotics before dental procedures outweigh the benefits, according to new guidelines, p. 22.

If preoperative hair removal is warranted, it should occur immediately before surgery, not the night before, p. 38.

Surgical patients who are taking beta-blockers before admission should continue this therapy throughout hospitalization, p. 39.

Aspirin-only therapy has no role in deep vein thrombosis prophylaxis, even though some practitioners continue to prescribe it for this indication, p. 40.
