Original Research: Predicting Injurious Falls in the Hospital Setting: Implications for Practice

By Amy L. Hester, Pao-Feng Tsai, Mallik Rettiganti, and Anita Mitchell

In an attempt to identify which patient factors are associated with injurious falls in hospitalized adults, the authors of this retrospective study analyzed 10 variables. Their findings may help hospital clinicians to identify at-risk patients and to create better fall-related injury prevention interventions.

Military Sexual Trauma in Male Service Members

By Denise M. Eckerlin, Andrea Kovalesky, and Matthew Jakupcak

This article examines the unique ways in which men experience military sexual trauma (MST) and explores the influence of stereotypes of masculinity, myths surrounding sexual assault, and military culture and structure on victims. It also describes current treatments for MST-related mental health conditions and how nurses can promote access to care.

Recognizing Myocardial Infarction in Women: A Case Study

By Debra L. Campo

The author provides an overview of the signs and symptoms of myocardial infarction in women and highlights how the failure to recognize them in the case of one woman—herself a nurse—led to misdiagnosis and could have resulted in death.
