10 CHRISTIANITY COMES TO CHINA'S CITIES

Leslie Hook, Princeton in Asia fellow at the REVIEW, finds Christianity spreading among urban Chinese and looks at why the appeal of faith has increased in the last few years, particularly for intellectuals and youth.

17 JAPAN'S BIG BANG: TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE?

Jean-François Minier, CEO for Asia Pacific at Dresdner Kleinwort, believes reform of Japan's financial sector has not been far-reaching enough to maintain Tokyo's status as the leading financial hub of Asia.

22 THE GEOPOLITICS OF ASIAN CYBERSPACE

Ronald Deibert, director of the Citizen Lab at the University of Toronto, explores the dark underbelly of the Internet and finds more and more Asian governments applying increasingly sophisticated techniques to censor the Web.

26 THE LOMBOK PACT'S EMPTY PROMISE

Hugh White, visiting fellow at the Lowy Institute and professor at Australian National University in Canberra, examines the recently signed security pact between Indonesia and Australia and discovers only hollow promises.

29 THE MORASS IN MINDANAO

Greg Rushford, editor of a free trade and security newsletter, finds that although a peace deal between the government and rebels is within reach in Mindanao, the prospects of pro-growth and reconciliation policies are slim.

34 FUZZY RULES MAKE BEAN COUNTERS MAD

Cathy Holcombe, an institutional sales director at Quam Securities in Hong Kong, wonders why accounting standards—that are supposed to protect investors—can sometimes cause much more harm than good.

38 SPECTER OF INEQUALITY HAUNTS TAIWAN

Craig Meer and Jonathan Adams, free-lance journalist and correspondent for Newsweek respectively, expose the social and economic costs of the growing income disparity that plagues Taiwan's dynamic economy.

43 TAIWAN'S RED SHIRT REBEL

Hugo Restall, editor of the REVIEW, interviews the leader of Taiwan's populist anticorruption movement, Shih Ming-teh, who is capping a life full of struggles against authority with one last hurrah.
