

10 CHINA'S LAST OPTION: LET THE YUAN SOAR

Michael Pettis, director of a New York-based fund-managing firm, says monetary conditions in China are out of control and predicts a nasty hangover for a country drunk on money.

16 SATISFY CHINA'S DEMAND FOR MONEY

Hugo Restall, editor of the REVIEW, learns from Nobel economics laureate Robert Mundell how Beijing can keep the yuan's value fixed and still avoid inflation.

20 STOP THE SPECTER OF A RISING RUPEE

Vivek Moorthy, professor of economics at IIM Bangalore, says India should pursue flexible exchange rates and curb foreign inflows in order to prevent a rise in the rupee.

24 HONG KONG'S ARRESTED DEVELOPMENT

Friedrich Wu, adjunct professor at Nanyang Technological University, asserts that hubris will cause Hong Kong to lose its position as China's window on the world by 2017.

28 A PERILOUS ESCAPE FROM PYONGYANG

Bertil Lintner, a journalist based in Thailand, chronicles the dangerous cross-Asia trek an increasing number of North Koreans are willing to undertake in order to escape from the clutches of Kim Jong Il's despotic regime.

33 CHINA'S REDS EMBRACE GREEN

Zhang Zhongxiang, senior fellow at the East-West Center in Honolulu, says China's leaders are staking their reputations on cleaning up the country's heavily polluted environment.

38 JAKARTA'S FORAY INTO ARMED DIPLOMACY

Eduardo Lachica, a former reporter for The Wall Street Journal Asia, sees Indonesian peacekeepers in Lebanon as a sign that Jakarta wants a bigger role in world affairs.

42 ASTANA'S LOVE-IN WITH BEIJING

Elliot Wilson, a Hong Kong-based journalist, analyzes Kazakhstan's increasing trade with China, and how it is affecting ties with its Russian cousins to the north.

46 INDIA'S ENERGY JUGGLING ACT

Marie Lall, visiting fellow at the National University of Singapore, maps the progress of the Iran-Pakistan-India pipeline and predicts it will deliver energy and regional peace.

50 CHINA'S MARKET PLAN TO SAVE THE TIGER

Barun S. Mitra, director of a Delhi-based think tank, notes the irony that the West should have to learn from communist China how to let market forces drive conservation efforts to protect tigers and other forms of endangered wildlife.
