BEIJING EMBRACES CLASSICAL FASCISM

Michael Ledeen, a foreign-policy expert at the American Enterprise Institute, warns that China's corporatist political culture will sooner or later spell trouble for its neighbors.

12

THE GULF BETWEEN TIBET AND ITS EXILES

Tsering Shakya, author of a ground-breaking history of modern Tibet, debunks the notion that the March unrest in Tibet was orchestrated from outside the country.

17

TIBET'S LEGAL RIGHT TO AUTONOMY

Paul Harris, a Hong Kong barrister and founding chairman of the Hong Kong Human Rights Monitor, shows that international law supports Tibetans' claim to self-determination.

21

CHINA'S HOLISTIC CENSORSHIP REGIME

Mr. X, a foreign media entrepreneur based in China whose identity must be protected to protect his livelihood, describes how businesses are co-opted into enforcing the government's corporatist values.

24

TO LISTEN AND TELL: SALMAN RUSHDIE

Salil Tripathi, a free-lance writer based in London, talks with award-winning novelist Salman Rushdie and finds him as committed as ever to free speech and the art of fiction.

28

VIETNAM: A TIGER IN TURMOIL

Jonathan Pincus and Vu Thanh Tu Anh, economists with the UNDP and Harvard University, and Tran Le Thuy, a journalist, analyze Vietnam's latest string of economic woes.

37

FRANKLY MR. KIM, WE COULDN'T GIVE A DAMN

Mike Breen, journalist, writer and business consultant based in Seoul, probes the attitudes of young South Koreans and discovers that many are largely indifferent to North Korea.

40

NORTH KOREA FANS THE FLAMES OF BITTER HATE

Brian Myers, a North Korea watcher at Busan's Dongseo University, says that unless Pyongyang tones down its xenophobic hate-mongering, negotiations will be fruitless.

43

HU JIA IN CHINA'S LEGAL LABYRINTH

Jerome Cohen and Eva Pils, co-director of NYU's U.S.-Asia Law Institute and assistant professor at CUHK's School of Law, respectively, document how the trial of activist Hu Jia violated China's own legal norms.

47

KEEPING BURMA'S JUNTA AFLOAT

Benedict Rogers, writer and human-rights activist, calls on the world's nations to reject May's farcical referendum in Burma and halt their appeasement of the military junta.

CONTENTS

51 PAVING THE PATH FOR GUAM'S BOOM

David Cohen, co-chair of the Pacific Initiative at international law firm Davis Wright Tremaine, says a realignment of U.S. armed forces will transform the Pacific economy.

54 ECON WITH ECO

Shannon May, anthropology student at UC Berkeley, and Saskia Sassen, sociology professor at Columbia University, look at sustainability in terms of ecocities and global cities.

REVIEWS:

Mary Kissel on a flawed argument against trading with China. PAGE 60 • Paul Mozur on Salman Rushdie's story of Mughals and Medicis. PAGE 62 • Denis McMahon on two attempts to tackle Asia's monetary instability. PAGE 64 • Bertil Lintner on a challenging but enlightening take on Thailand's political system. PAGE 66 • Sripriya Ranganathan on a refreshingly unjudgmental history of independent India. PAGE 68 • Peter Van Ness on a stark account of the failures of the six-party talks. PAGE 70 • Samanth Subramanian on an astonishingly definitive biography of V.S. Naipaul. PAGE 72 • Tim Kindseth on an intriguing if unfocused foray into the world of Chinese food. PAGE 74

JAUNT THROUGH ASIA:

Nicholas Frisch, a free-lance writer, finds the new Zagat guide to Beijing fails to uncover the diverse Chinese eateries that make it the culinary capital of China. PAGE 77
