

TABLE OF CONTENTS

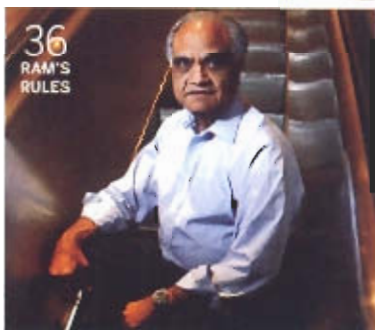

02.18.08

Volume 157, Number 3

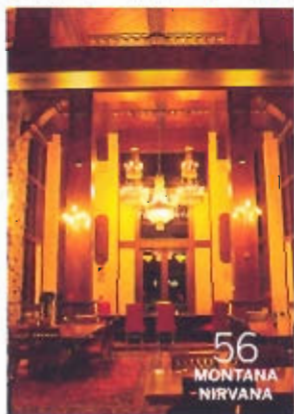

44
THE VIEW FROM MAINE

40
THE POLITICAL ECONOMY
→

36
RAM'S RULES

56
MONTANA
NIRVANA

→
66
GROWTH ENGINE

FORTUNE

FEATURES

INVESTOR'S SPECIAL

26 Now What?

Markets are crazy, the outlook is dicey, but there are plenty of ways to profit if you keep your cool. BY SHAWN TULLY

Full Coverage For more on the downturn, see our online special report: fortune.com/recession2008

36 Managing in a Downturn

How smart executives can use the bad times to make their companies better, stronger, and faster. BY RAM CHARAN

39 America for Sale

Foreign ownership of U.S. assets is accelerating—and that's a worrisome trend. BY GEOFF COLVIN

40 The Politics of Pain

How the candidates play the sluggish economy will determine the winner—and it may not be a Democrat. BY NINA EASTON

44 On the Road

Is the economy really on the rocks? We packed our bags and canvassed the country—seven cities in seven days—to find out how America's business owners are doing. BY DAVID WHITFORD

53 Walk Softly and Carry a Big Checkbook

Forget Google. The real king of advertising is mild-mannered GroupM CEO Irwin Gotlieb. BY JESSI HEMPEL

56 America's Most Exclusive Club

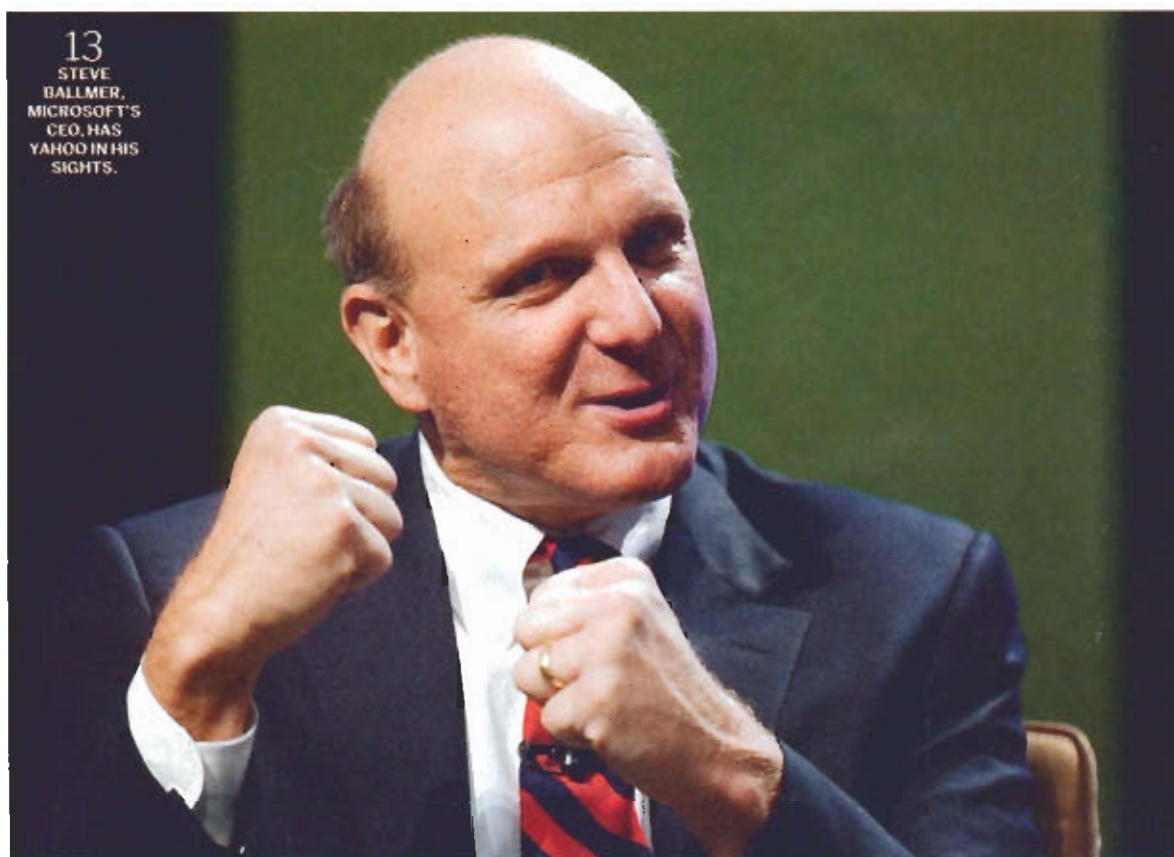

Tim Blixseth carved a private golf and ski resort out of the Montana wilderness. But the same skills that took him from a hardscrabble boyhood to hobnobbing with Bill Gates are now tearing his empire apart. BY WILLIAM D. COHAN

66 Turkey's Hot Fund

Banker Coskun Ulusoy turned OYAK into a major financial player, enriching Turkey's military along the way. BY PETER GUMBEL

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Volume 157, Number 3

13
STEVE BALLMER,
MICROSOFT'S CEO, HAS YAHOO IN HIS SIGHTS.

FIRST

10 HACK ATTACK

The Gathering is a massive digital free-for-all where techies show off their chops. BY PAUL SLOAN

12 A Simple Plan

A public-private partnership tries to take a bite out of malaria by merging two drugs into one. BY ELIZA BARCLAY

13 A Bold Bid for Yahoo

The story behind Microsoft's $44.6 billion offer to buy the Internet giant. The deal, which Yahoo was considering at presstime, would greatly expand Microsoft's online business and turn up the heat on its archrival, Google. BY ADAM LASHINSKY ➔ Online For bonus coverage on the megadeal, go to fortune.com.

18 Letter From Silicon Valley

Shades of AOL-Time Warner?

TECHNOLOGY

21 Game of the Year

The latest creation from the folks who brought us the Sims is overdue—and truly out of this world. An inside look at Spore, the most hotly anticipated game of 2008.

BY MICHAEL V. COPELAND

➔ Video See a video review by writer Michael Copeland at fortune.com/video.

23 Need to Know

Cool stuff on our radar screen, including a universal remote that turns off any TV within 50 feet, the hottest new massively multiplayer game, and a USB credit card. BY JIA LYNN YANG

24 Techland

Who owns your address book? You probably thought you did. But a battle is brewing over how free and open digital contact lists really are. BY JOSH QUITTMER

8 LETTERS

71 INDEX

72 BING!