FEATURE ARTICLES

- 293 Factors Affecting the Long-Term Care Preferences of the Elderly in Taiwan
Min-Huey Chung, Nanly Hsu, Yin-Chun Wang, Herng-Ching Lin, Ya-Li Huang, Roger L. Amidon, and Senyeong Kao

Taking into consideration socio-demographics, health condition and access to such medical care services, this study examines both economic and family factors in an attempt to gain an understanding of the knowledge of, and attitudes towards, the different types of long term care amongst the elderly.

- 302 Promoting Cognitive Health and Vitality: A Review of Clinical Implications
Andrea M. Yevchak, Susan J. Loeb, and Donna M. Fick

The purpose of this paper is to present a clinical review of the literature identifying strategies for promoting cognitive health and vitality in older adults. Emerging research trends in this important area are discussed, as are implications for nursing practice.

- 311 Simple Balance and Mobility Tests Can Assess Falls Risk When Cognition Is Impaired
Kathryn A. McMichael, Joni Vander Bilt, Laurie Lavery, Eric Rodriguez, and Mary Ganguli

Simple balance tests can help assess falls risk, particularly in cognitively impaired elderly who have elevated falls risk and might not accurately recall previous falls.

- 324 Levels of Personhood: A Model for Dementia Care
Bill Buron

The Personhood Model for Dementia Care provides a structure for organizing existing person-centered interventions and strategies in dementia care.
