- 89 Medication Beliefs and Antihypertensive Adherence Among Older Adults: A Pilot Study

Todd M. Rupp, Fabienne Dobbels, and Sabina De Geest

This pilot study examines the relationship between medication beliefs, demographic variables, and antihypertensive medication adherence among a sample of older adults.

- 96 Reactions of Assisted Living Staff to Behavioral and Psychological Symptoms of Dementia

Glenise McKenzie, Linda Teri, Kenneth Pike, David LaFazia, and June van Leynseele

The purpose of this study was to describe the types and frequency of psychological symptoms of dementia (BPSD) reported by unlicensed caregivers and to describe reactions and training of the caregivers who provide care to residents with BPSD.

- 105 Raising the Index of Suspicion for Elder Abuse: Cognitive Impairment, Falls, and Injury Patterns in the Emergency Department

Carolyn E. Ziminski, Linda R. Phillips, and Diana Lynn Woods

Findings suggest that persons with cognitive impairment have unique injury patterns based on fall status, which has implications for elder abuse screening. An increased recognition of common injuries in older adults can aid in elder abuse assessment by providing a reference point for uncommon injuries.

- 113 The Development of Direct-Care Staff Social Interaction Coding Schemas for Nursing Home Residents with Dementia

Haesook Kim and Diana Lynn Woods

Two social interaction coding schemas were developed to measure the dementia competent and culturally competent social interaction of direct care nursing home (HN) staff for persons with dementia in a Korean American NH.

- 118 Functional Status in Older Women Following Gynecological Cancer Surgery: Can Choice of Measure Influence Evidence for Clinical Practice?

Janet H. Van Cleave, Brian L. Egleston, Meg Bourbonniere, Lauren Cardone, and Ruth McCorkle

To demonstrate how differing measures may generate varied findings, we compared and contrasted data from the SF-12 Health Survey Physical Component Summary Scale and the Enforced Social Dependency Scale.

140 Developing Nurses' Geriatric Expertise Through the Geriatric Resource Nurse Model

Jeanne St. Pierre and Renee Twibell

The Geriatric Resource Nurse (GRN) model provides a way to improve quality of care for hospitalized older adults via development of gerontological nursing expertise. This project implemented the GRN model and evaluated changes in direct-care nurses' knowledge, confidence, and satisfaction related to care of older adult inpatients.
