Contents

Cover Artist
Photography by Elie Honein

68 Are You a Collaborative Leader? The ability to harness ideas, people, and resources from across boundaries of all kinds has become a business essential. To develop it, focus on four key skills. Herminia Ibarra and Morten T. Hansen

76 The Unselfish Gene Human beings are not as selfish as we've assumed, recent research suggests. If we recognize that, we can build systems geared for our better selves. Yochai Benkler

86 Bringing Minds Together The founder of Boston Scientific shares the stories of two innovators whose collaborative leadership upended established industries and produced revolutionary advances in medical science. John Abele

94 Building a Collaborative Enterprise Organizations that want to become the household names of this century must use collaboration to innovate efficiently on a large scale. Paul Adler, Charles Heckscher, and Laurence Prusak

102 Who Moved My Cube? Today we know that casual work encounters promote cooperation and innovation, and companies design with this in mind. Why do their efforts so often backfire? Truly interactive spaces balance three things—proximity, privacy, and permission. Anne-Laure Fayard and John Weeks
The Age of Hyperspecialization

Atomizing knowledge tasks for vast communities of specialized digital workers can greatly improve quality, speed, and cost. Here’s how to take advantage of this new trend. Thomas W. Malone, Robert J. Laubacher, and Tammy Johns

THE HBR INTERVIEW

Technology, Tradition, And the Mouse

Thoughts on Disney in China, modernizing Mickey, stewarding a great brand—and more

An interview with Disney CEO Robert A. Iger, by Adi Ignatius

The New Psychology of Strategic Leadership

Why is it so difficult to dream up truly novel ways of doing business? It’s because of cognitive limitations we all share—but can overcome. Giovanni Gavetti

The Merger Dividend

M&As present unique opportunities to develop leaders. Don’t let the next deal slip through your fingers. Ron Ashkenas, Suzanne Francis, and Rick Heinick

Adaptability: The New Competitive Advantage

If your competitive environment is uncertain and fast-changing, you may need to exploit the capabilities that create “adaptive advantage.” Martin Reeves and Mike Deimler

47 FINANCIAL REFORM

Making Financial Markets Work For Consumers

Advice for the director of the new Consumer Financial Protection Bureau John Y. Campbell, Howell E. Jackson, Brigitte C. Madrian, and Peter Tufano

142 THE GLOBE

The Paradox of Samsung’s Rise

To move beyond its home markets, Samsung had to turn away from what had made the company successful. Tarun Khanna, Jaeyong Song, and Kyungmook Lee
Departments July–August 2011

14 From the Editor

18 Interaction

23 Idea Watch

23 FIRST
What’s Your Social Media Strategy? Four ways companies are using technology to form connections.

PLUS Why fair bosses often fall behind, and the advantages of being “out” rather than closeted at work.

30 DEFEND YOUR RESEARCH
The Color Pink is Bad for Fighting Breast Cancer: The strange effect that messages with gender cues can have on women.

32 VISION STATEMENT
Deconstructing the Groupon Phenomenon: Which online discounts produced the best results?

34 STRATEGIC HUMOR

COLUMNS
36 ROSABETH MOSS KANTER
In an ever-changing technology landscape, continuous evolution is key.

38 THOMAS J. TIERNEY
Even competitors can accomplish in a group what no one member could do alone.

41 HOW I DID IT
The CEO of Bayer Corp. on Creating A Lean Growth Machine: Blindsided by a proposal to close down his company’s North American headquarters, the author drastically cut overhead—and won $70 million to transform the organization. Gregory S. Babe

Experience

149 MANAGING YOURSELF
A Smarter Way to Network: If you think what you need to do is build a big circle of high-powered contacts, you’re dead wrong. The best networks, research shows, comprise six diverse kinds of connections.

Rob Cross and Robert Thomas

154 CRUCIBLE
A Tough Lesson in Local Politics: What a young sports entrepreneur learned by facing up to community critics.

Daniel McGinn

157 CASE STUDY
The Gentleman’s “Three”: If everyone receives the same polite score on performance reviews, how do you decide who gets the ax?

Brian J. Hall and Andrew Wasnyczuk

162 SYNTHESIS
Reviews

164 EXECUTIVE SUMMARIES

168 LIFE’S WORK
Desmond Tutu: On the patience of South Africans and their “wonderful capacity to laugh.”