Features December 2016

THE BIG IDEA
Mapping Frontier Economies
Global players in search of double-digit growth are finding it in low-income, high-risk countries such as Myanmar, Mozambique, Vietnam, and Rwanda, where first movers can be handsomely rewarded. Aldo Musacchio and Eric Werker

HEALTH CARE
Health Care Needs Real Competition
In other sectors of the economy, competition improves quality and efficiency, spurs innovation, and drives down costs. Health care should be no exception. Leemore S. Dafny and Thomas H. Lee

MANAGING TECHNOLOGY
Fixing Discrimination in Online Marketplaces
Platform designers need to make careful choices about automation, algorithms, and the use of identifying data. Ray Fisman and Michael Luca
"I was a real perfectionist."

IN EVERY ISSUE
12 From the Editor
14 Contributors
18 Interaction
21 Strategic Humor
116 Executive Summaries

IDEA WATCH
24 STRATEGY
The Scary Truth About Corporate Survival
Companies really are failing at a faster rate. How can managers stem the tide? PLUS Sustainability tactics that get results, the costliest "people issues," and more

32 DEFEND YOUR RESEARCH
MBAs Are More Self-Serving Than Other CEOs
A new study finds a correlation between the degree and strategies that hurt firms but benefit executives.

35 HOW I DID IT
PayPal's CEO on Creating Products for Underserved Markets
The company set out to be a "customer champion" for both merchants and consumers. Dan Schulman

EXPERIENCE
98 MANAGING YOURSELF
Do You Hate Your Boss?
Concrete ways to improve a dysfunctional relationship
Manfred F.R. Kets de Vries

103 CASE STUDY
Should You Rehire a Defector?
An entrepreneur reconsiders a colleague who left for a competitor.
Jyotsna Bhatnagar and Nakul Gupta

114 SYNTHESIS
The Philanthropist's Burden
Hard cash can't always solve hard problems. Tim Sullivan

120 LIFE'S WORK
Brian Wilson
A founding member of the Beach Boys on innovation, collaboration, and overcoming personal obstacles

What's a modern philanthropist to do? page 114

MBAs are more likely to put their own interests first. page 32