Features

28 Common Ground, Not a Battle Ground: Violence Prevention at a Detoxification Facility
Clinical staff and security personnel must be prepared to handle threatening behavior when working with intoxicated clients. Four components are paramount to reducing assault rates.
Mary A. Adamson, RN, MS, CNS; Audrey A. Vincent, RN, BSN; and Jeff Cundiff, EMT-B

36 Disorder or Delusion? Living with Morgellons Disease
Its symptoms include crawling and stinging sensations and a feeling of "bugs" under the skin, but Morgellons disease is frequently dismissed by dermatologists. Learn how to treat this "mystery disease" when patients seek psychiatric help.
Lindsay Simpson, RN, BSN; and Marjorie Baier, RN, PhD

42 Treatment of Conversion Disorder: A Clinical and Holistic Approach
Meet Teresa, a 19-year-old woman whose sudden onset of nausea, paralysis, seizures, and blindness had no medical or neurological explanation and led her to an inpatient unit, where staff had to change their own thinking before helping the patient.
Sandra L. Tocchio, RN

Sections

17 Psychopharmacology
Clinical Implications of Chirality and Stereochemistry in Psychopharmacology
Reflecting on the importance of molecular mirror-imaging can ultimately improve patient care.
Robert H. Howland, MD

23 Youth in Mind
Understanding and Promoting Attachment
Help children with disordered attachment patterns secure a healthy relationship with their caregivers.
Samantha L. Wilson, PhD

Departments

8 Editorial
10 News
12 Product Update
13 Clip & Save: Drug Chart Overweight & Obesity
15 Letter to the Editor
50 CNE Quiz
52 NARSAD Art

Full-text articles available online at JPNonline.com