NOTEBOOK

MIDDLE EAST: Israel's commanders hope U.S. bunker-buster bombs will take out Hizballah's underground rocket launchers, but public confidence in the leadership's war tactics is waning... 7

COLA WARS: Environmentalists claim the Indian government isn't doing enough to regulate the soft-drink industry—and Coke and Pepsi come under attack over pesticides 8

MILESTONES 10

10 QUESTIONS: Filmmaker Francis Ford Coppola 11

WORLD

TERRORISM: The investigation into an alleged plot to bomb transatlantic passenger planes nets some two dozen Muslim suspects in Britain, highlighting the internal threat facing the U.K.—and underscoring the depth of disaffection that plagues the British underclass 12

VIEWPOINT: Social integration and greater religious tolerance help explain why Muslims in the U.S. aren't as likely as their counterparts in Europe to adopt radical Islamic beliefs 20

CUBA: An ailing Fidel Castro has entrusted Cuba to the care of his younger brother Raúl. A TIME reporter who knows him well offers an up-close glimpse of the long-eclipsed sibling 24

ASIA

CHINA: Once the sweatshop of the world, Shenzhen—like China as a whole—must reinvent itself for a new era 26

BUSINESS

INNOVATION: The Segway scooter was supposed to revolutionize personal transportation, but was shunned by consumers. Undeterred, inventor Dean Kamen returns with a new slate of gadgets no one knew they needed 29

ENVIRONMENT

FISHING FOLLIES: Ultra-efficient industrial fishing techniques and a ravenous appetite for sushi, especially in Japan, are rapidly emptying the Mediterranean of its once-limitless stocks of bluefin tuna 32

SPORT

BASKETBALL: A charismatic college coach attempts to rebuild Team U.S.A. in time for the World Championship in Japan ... 36

ARTS

MOVIES: Director M. Night Shyamalan risks his extraordinary winning streak with an unlikely tale of a water nymph 38

CULTURE: Madonna wants to save the orphans of Malawi—but is the world starting to tire of celebrity philanthropists? 41
